Linetime's early adoption of Microsoft's .NET architecture paid dividends both in terms of software development and panel happiness, with one panel member describing the firm as an 'excellent all-rounder'. Another panel member described Linetime's Liberate as their 'favourite', with the system's links to Possession Claims Online and connections to Revenue and Customs' website for SDLT, suggesting Linetime 'gets the web and e-government'. Linetime also gets compliance with 'great' anti-money laundering integration, basic HR/customer relationship management functionality, an 'extensive range of online capabilities', 'very adequate' budget variance analysis and cashflow forecasting and a system that is 'highly configurable', said the panel.

In the round, Linetime impressed.
